The Currency Question in Richmond,

Virginia. [Correspondence of the Baltimore Gazette.]

RICHMOND, VA., August 10 .- On reaching this city your correspondent at once took means to place himself in communication with such men as would fairly represent the sentiment of the business interests, and has been favored with the views of some of the most influential merchants, bankers, and manufacturers. There is, as might have been foretold, diversity of views in regard to resumption of specie-payments. With many who desire that end there is yet a disposition to temporize—something of "at another time, perhaps, I may hear you," order; but the prevailing sentiment is against any inflation, and there is a strong representation of hard-money men. The Kelley 3.65 scheme has its advocates, who are deceived by its plausibility, and see in it a short road to specie-payments. The demand is also made by many that the United States Government shall receive its notes in payment of customs and all dues to it from citizens, or, as it is expressed here, recognize the real value of its currency. The following conversation will show the drift of sentiment:

The views of Mr. A. L. Ellett, senior partner in one of the largest wholesale dry-goods houses on Main street, is as follows: "What is your opinion of the currency question as it stands at present?" " I think that the speediest way to the resumption of specie-payments is that the United States Government shall take its notes for customs dues, and debts to it of every description. If this were done it would be but a small step to specie-payments, as it would do away with all gold competition and leave the Government the only buyer in the market for such sums as it would need to pay the interest on its goldbearing bonds."

"In regard to the process of resump-"I am opposed to either inflation or con- Mr. Kelley's proposition. traction of the volume of the currency, but crease of values, but would attain the desired result gradually from the developments of gold, the use of paper money cannot be system, exists, panies must come to greater or lesser extent. People should live more prudently, in order that the exports of the country should equal the imports, which would prove a valuable safeguard." "What do you think of Mr. Kelley's 3.65 convertible bond scheme?"

"I am totally opposed to Mr. Kelley. The whole thing is only a question of interest. Under its operation capitalists would invest largely whenever interest becomes low, thus contracting the currency; and by a reverse process the currency would be increased when a high rate of interest prevails. This would be greatly to the detriment of the mercantile community. In fact, the law would enable capitalists to inflate or contract at will, and to make interest on money as high or low as they desire."

Mr. J. L. Williams, of the firm of Williams & Gibson, real estate brokers and ounkers, in reply to a request, made the folowing clear exposition of his views on the general questions of currency and redemp-

"What is most needed in the country at present is honesty and fair dealing-giving and receiving equivalent in place of irresponsible obligations on a baseless currency and now that we are so near a specie basis, the true measure of values, we had better come to it at once. The only argument in favor of it flation is that a large proportion of the debts men owe have been contracted that men who have run in debt should have to pay in a more valuable one. We can bring down values to a true standard, but debts remain the same. In reply, we say that if the country could be relied on at once to enter upon a course of economy, to deal prudently, to pay off old debts, and be content with slow and honest accretions, it might be well to enlarge the currency for general relief, but it is almost certain, it it is enlarged, the people generally will have as little respect for it as ever, and will continue in the same recklessness as within the last ten years, so that at the end of two or three years our condition will be as bad, if not worse, than it has ever been. The surest way to redemption is to convince the public mind that no inflation will be made and that the only way to get the country back into a healthy condition is by honest dealings and slow accretions. The Government should receive its notes for all dues, and tree banking should be allowed." The president of one of the most important and ably-managed banks in the city was questioned, with the following result: "What are your views on the subject of specie-payments?" "The most intelligent bankers and merchants are in favor of hard money and the earliest return to specie-payments."

.. What would be the effect of any infli-

. Inflation would only aggravate the present evil of an already too-greatly inflated currency.

"How would you return to hard money ?" " To return to specie might be done by decree of Congress fixing a date-say, July 1, 1876,-ample time to bring out all hoarded coin, and to enable the country to prepare the value of real and personal property seems to indicate a national cure for the evil which, if aided by the business of the country, would soon effect the object, for there can be no real prosperity until we do reach specie-payments. The people of the United States should not be willing for any reason to live longer with a currency interior to that of any other civilized country. If they do, credit must suffer. The whole country, and especially poor men, who constitute the great mass of population, are paying teo much for what they concume. Above all, I would rule of their court that an agent (as was Sir state that a vitiated currency injures deeply John Hay) could not be allowed to make any

Another representative of the iron interests was called upon, but stated that the only opinion was that the Government should take its notes in payment of all dues. Mr. George L. Christian, clerk of the Su-the City Council, said in reply to various questions: "I am a hard-money man and against any inflation of the currency, which is only recdered worthless thereby. I had rather pay one dollar than two for the same thing. The people are now better able to stand resumption than ever before. We have bad enough irredeemable currency, and a dollar should mean a dollar payable in gold at the United States Treasury. Resumption must come, and the sooner the better." Among others called upon was a member of a large boot- and shoe-house, who was in favor of a return to specie-payments, but only by a very gradual process, as the interest of the debtor class required that time should be given them for payment.

A well-known merchant thought that no more currency was needed, but did not favor any alteration at present. The great need was, be said, confidence in the intention of the Government to pay its notes; and if they were received for customs dues this would be established, and the trading in gold broken up, which would be the easiest way to specie-payments. He also favored

Even if based on ample for business purposes, but that it should consist entirely of greenbacks. In avoided, and so long as that, with the credit 1865 he would have voted to fix a date for resumption, but did not consider it practicable at the present time.

A gentleman largely engaged in tobacco trade thought the currency question should be allowed to settle itself, and a specie basis reached by the natural appreciation in the value of currency. The Government should receive its notes in payment of all dues, and buy gold if needed for its use. He favored Mr. Kelley's scheme, but was opposed to free banking. This, so far as your correspondent has pro-

DECOYS .- In a recent Leeds Mercury we find a report of a decision of an English court in a case which will remind our readers of certain exposures here in railroad rules of common honesty will be as clearly

Some four or five years ago, as may be in the recollection of some of our readers, a Mr. Longbottom desired to induce the British public to form a company for the purchase of some oil wells in Canada from a Mr. Prince. These wells were represented to be of very great value; but the names of Prince and Longbottom not being known so widely as to draw gold from the pockets of a suspicious and uncharitable generation, Mr. Long. bottom found it necessary to solicit some gentlemen of position" to show their contidence in the inexhaustible sources of wealth possessed by Mr. Prince's wells by allowing their names to appear as directors of a company formed to purchase the property. It was not, of course, to be expected that those who thus forwarded the philanthropic aims of Messrs. Prince and Longbottom should pay for shares, and accordingly it was agreed that Sir J. Hay, who became a director of the company, should receive as his qualification for office forty shares out of those which were to be given to Mr. Prince in part payment of the purchasemoney. The purchase was to be conditional on the favorable report of a deputation sent out to America, and the price tixed was £480,-000-viz., £320,000 in fully paid-up shares and £160,000 in cash. Subsequently a doubt, of course merely legal, was raised as to whether the vendor's shares were a proper qualification for Sir J. Hay as director; and that this scruple might be removed, Mr. Longbottom, on receiving one day as agent for Mr Prince checks signed by the direc ors for £58, 000 towards the purchase-money, endorsed and handed over to Sir J. Hay at the directors meeting, which he attended as a director, a check for £1.000. Sir J. Hay gave in this check to his bankers, and on the following day drew a check on them for £1,000, which he paid to the company for his forty shares, Strange to say, when, as unfortunately was the case, the company had subsequently failed, the question actually came up before Vice-Chancellor Malins whether this transaction could stand, and he decided that it was a mere device, and left Sir J. Hay still liable for £1,000 on his own shares. And now the for the change. The present shrinkage in lords justices have dismissed Sir J. Hay's appeal against this decision with costs, In emphatic language Lord Justice James says that by the check given to Sir J. Hay the money of the company was taken by one of the directors, by the authority and with the consent and knowledge of his co-directors, out of the moneys of the company, for the purpose of paying that which was a bribe to him for baying sold the company in the transaction. The check never ceased to be the property of the company. Both the lords justices also point out that it is a COMPANY G'S ANNIVERSARY .- The nineteenth anniversary celebration of Company G, First regiment Virginia volunteers, took place yesterday at the pumphouse, and proved to be a most pleasant and sociable affair. The company assembled at Old-Market Hall at an early hour, and paraded through the principal streets with full ranks-about sixty strong-after which they proceeded to the pump bouse, where the company had their target practice. The shooting was done at a range of one hundred yards, and the best shot was made by Private William C. Meredith, to whom was awarded the company medal. The presentation-speech was made by Captain J. H. Parater, who took occasion to pay a high compliment to Private Meredith for his soldierly conduct generally and the persistency with which he stuck to the company through thick and thin.

The speeches were well-timed and greatly enjoyed, the speakers many times being interrupted by hearty applause. Colonel Johnson, in responding to the toast to the First Virginia regiment, took occasion to compliment Captain Parater in the highest compliment Captain Parater in the highest compand tackets, at LEVY BROTHERS. terms. He said that when he took command jackets, at LEVY BROTHERS'. of the regiment he found Company G in a languishing condition, and to-day, owing to the indomitable energy of Captain Parater, it was second to no company in the regiment. He knew no captain during the war who could manage men better. The fact that it paraded sixty men yesterday was the best evidence that could be afforded of the efficiency of its officers.

During the day the soldiers and their guests enjoyed themselves in various ways, the rain, however, interfering at times with the festivities. Among the features of the entertainment was the very fine singing of a number of the gentlemen present, who treated the company to some very fine music; the airs of "ye olden time," however, being re-As a whole, the celebration was a perfect

A few days ago he returned to the city and carried off the child, a boy aged about six years. Nothing has been heard of him since, and the mother, who lives on Third street, is very much excited about the 'sudden abduction of her child.
